ACTON 1943

As I Recall, Reminiscences of Early Canberra by Charles Daley, edited by Shirley Purchase of the Canberra & District Historical Society – Chapter on Acton that in part reads: WHEN ACTON WAS A COUNTRY HOMESTEAD – Apart from its attractive natural setting Acton will always occupy a unique place in the history of the capital. It was the choice of the first white settler in this district, Lieutenant Joshua John Moore in 1823 and after the area became the site for the capital in 1911, it was the first land in the Territory acquired... The homestead became the residence of Charles Robert Scrivener, Director of Lands & Surveys, and right opposite the first administrative building was erected in 1912, flanked on the north-west by a Works Office, a Post Office and a Commonwealth Bank. Adjoining these a nursery was established where the first experiments were made by Weston in testing indigenous and exotic flora for the future city. It was retained for years as a pleasant park after the main nursery moved to Yarralumla...Further along the ridge Bachelors Quarters (afterwards Lennox House) and eight timber residences facing east were erected, greatly appreciated by officers previously living under canvas. A residence for the Administrator, Miller was built at the same time [Canberra House built 1912] as well as the first hospital on the University site...

Canberra Times 11th November 1943 – MRS CS Daley, Death after a brief illness. Outstanding career of public service. The death at Sydney early yesterday morning during her sleep of Mrs CS Daley after a brief illness has lost to Canberra a personality who has rendered unique services to the Canberra community in many avenues of public activity for more than 17 years. Henrietta Jessie Shaw Daley was the daughter of the late Mr and Mrs P Obbinson of Armadale, Melbourne and was educated at the Presbyterian Ladies College and the University of Melbourne. She was married to Mr CS Daley in 1917 and permanently took up residence in Canberra in August 1926

In the intervening years she has become known in Canberra for public spirit and high principle which she has applied to Canberra movements. Although she refrained from being connected with sectional bodies, she was ready at all times to take active part in social work. Apart from her associations with public bodies however, she has exert6ed useful influence in the welcoming of new citizens to Canberra, many of whom found their entry to a new city made easier by the grace of Mrs Daley as hostess. She took a deep interest in educational, cultural and welfare movements, particularly those calculated to elevate family in life and promote the welfare of youth.
In the years before and immediately after the first transfers of Commonwealth Departments from Melbourne the foundations were laid of many institutions that had fashioned the civic life and social intercourse of Canberra. Some of these societies have not endured due to the changing circumstances, while others owe their present strength to the guidance of their founders and the officers who directed their early affairs. Mrs Daley was an outstanding figure in a comparatively small band of women imbued with purpose and displaying a capacity for organisation that was instrumental in many of our public bodies coming into being. One of her earliest activities was in connection with the Women's and Infants' Welfare Committee of the Canberra Social Service Association from the activities which sprang from the foundation of the Canberra Mothercraft Society. Mrs Daley was one of the first officers of the Society and was for some years President...
