

INTRODUCTION – CORRECTIONS

CAMPS 2009

In early 2000 I began this work of compiling, updating information that I had collected over the previous decade. By using the computer - the electronic media and saving information on CDs I was able to add far more photographs than I would have been able to do if confined to the the more limiting printed media.

However, as is the way of things – new information has come to light since this work was completed in 2004. In particular, the site of No 1 Labourers Camp – it is on Capital Hill, which was a part of Westlake in the 1920s. The site which I believed to be No 1 was the site of the shortlived May 1927 camp established for the men of the police force and other services taking part in the opening ceremonies on 9th May 1927. The updated information is now published in A STORY OF CAPITAL HILL Gugler 2009.

I do not intend to rewrite all the information in the files, but draw the reader's attention to a mistake that I have made. The Tradesmen's Camp, Westlake was established on the hill opposite Lotus Bay in 1924 not 1923 and No 1 Labourers Camp was established on Capitol Hill (spelt then with and 'o' not 'a'), Westlake in 1923 not 1924. At some time in the future I will go through all the files to correct this error and update information.

Ann Gugler April, 2009